A Letter from FEE's Interim President

The more complex our economy, the more we should rely on the miraculous, self-adapting processes of men acting freely,” wrote Leonard E. Read, FEE’s founder and long-time president. “No mind of man nor any combination of minds can even envision, let alone intelligently control, the countless human energy exchanges in a simple society, to say nothing of a complex one.”

Four decades since Leonard passed away, FEE remains steadfast to the mission he faithfully set forth for the organization. He would be proud to know we’ve never deviated from the message.

Those “miraculous, self-adapting processes of men acting freely” are at the core of all the metrics and the programs you will read about in this annual report. Even people born into a free society must be educated about freedom’s principles, lest they fall prey to the delusions and temptations of freedom’s enemies.

As we engage our youthful audiences (via seminars, web content, social media, in-person events, and more), we work from the specific learning objectives we’ve constructed. We're not satisfied unless we see clear evidence that our audiences are truly learning what we teach. Those objectives include a better understanding of the profit motive, individual rights and liberty, entrepreneurship, free markets and free prices, limited government, sound money, and personal character.

That last element—personal character—is crucial because we know of no society in history that lost its character and kept its liberties! If it fails on the character front, a society is in for trouble because very little else will go the right way.

Leonard Read taught us that truth is not a numbers game. In other words, you can be alone, and you can be right. Free people of strong character do not give in to error. They fight for what they know to be right. They are always on the lookout for new and better ways to speak truth not only to power, but to anyone with an open mind.

Please know that although we're proud of the numbers in this report, the young minds they represent are what we get most excited about. Your support allows us to reach them with a message more vital today than ever before!

By the way, this is my swan song as Interim President. Like the rest of our staff, I am thrilled that by the time this reaches you, our new president, Diogo Costa, will have taken office. Please be sure to see his letter on pages 20 and 21.

Sincerely,

Lawrence W. Reed
Interim President

A Letter from FEE's Incoming President

It is with great excitement and determination that I join the Foundation for Economic Education as its 12th president.

I look forward to learning how we at FEE can earn your renewed support, but first, allow me to introduce myself.

My name is Diogo Costa. I was born and raised in Brazil, where I have spent most of my life learning, leading, and educating others about the principles of liberty. FEE has been part of my personal journey with the liberty movement since the beginning. In 2004, a FEE seminar inspired me to abandon my plans to attend law school and build a career advancing liberty instead.

Since then, my work has centered on spreading free-market ideas, whether through teaching political economy, leading innovative government institutions, or developing public policy. Yet, nothing in my career has been as personally exciting as the prospect of leading FEE to even greater accomplishments.

FEE was central to the 20th-century liberty renaissance. At a time when top-down government control seemed to many like the only way to prevent economic and social crises, FEE was a brave counter-voice in favor of the free market.

And yet, in the 21st century, there is still much to do to advance liberty. Although FEE is reaching more young people than ever before, statism is running rampant. In a world facing challenges such as the rise of authoritarian tech regulation and censorship, the tribalism of identity politics, and the crisis of legitimacy facing liberal democracies, FEE's mission is more important than ever.

We stand on the cusp of a transformative wave of technological disruption poised to reshape every aspect of society. To advance liberty in today's world, FEE must innovate and evolve, leveraging artificial intelligence and reimagining our signature programs for a new era, while staying true to our core values. We must find novel ways of bringing to life Leonard Read's freedom philosophy for a new generation.

While many organizations have become overly politicized or narrowly focused on short-term advocacy, FEE stands out as a principled voice, committed to the long-term advancement of timeless ideas. We remain upstream of policy and politics, focused on shaping the intellectual currents and the core leadership that will ultimately define our future.

As incoming president, I am eager to build on the strength of our 78-year legacy, capitalizing on our current partnerships and increasing collaboration with others in the liberty movement to maximize our effectiveness and achieve lasting impact.

Thank you for your confidence as we venture courageously into the future. Together, we will continue carrying the torch of liberty.

With gratitude,

Diogo Costa
President
